The New York Yankees powered to a respectable 98 wins in the replay. The Yanks fell short versus the Los Angeles Angels and Cleveland Indians.

Forty-eight (48) games were decided by 1-run in the replay versus fifty (50) in actual play.

And Yes, Roger Maris hit 61 home runs in the replay!

Season at a Glance

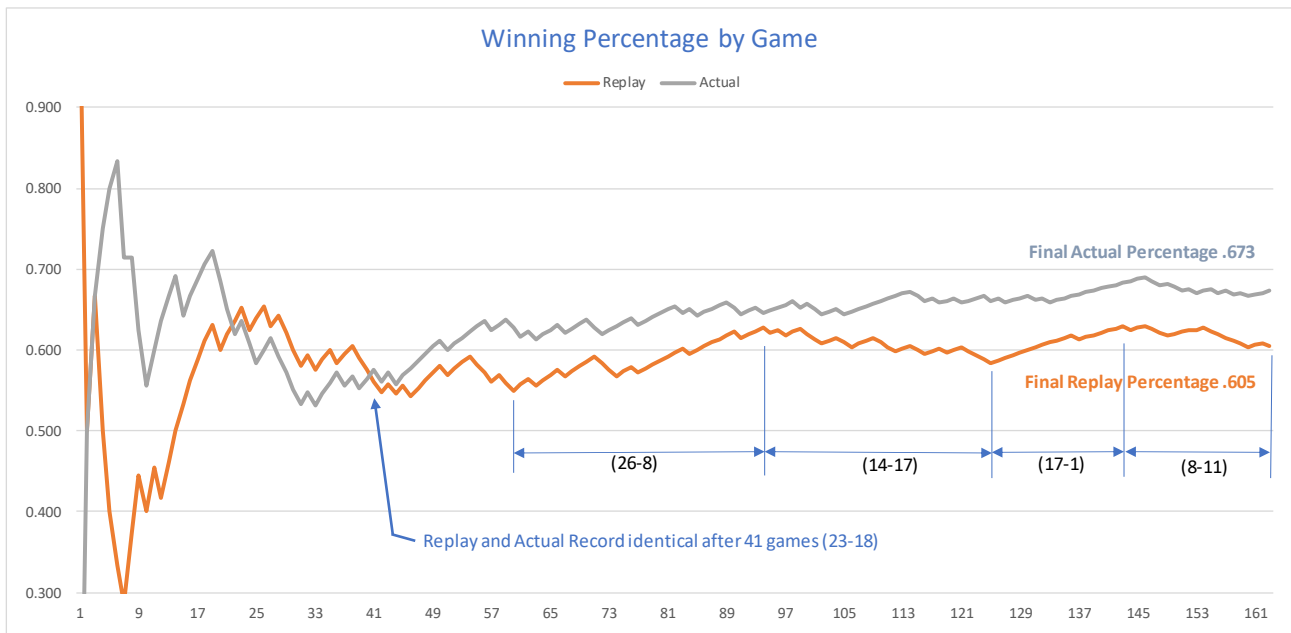

After forty-one games into the replay, the Yankees matched their identical record at 23-18. For the balance of the season, the Yanks were steaky; sometimes playing like they would never lose again and at other times struggling to find a win. The replay produced 11 additional losses vs. the actual season.

Yankee replay pitching was stellar. Yankee replay ERA was 3.03 vs. 3.46 actual. Yankee replay WHIP was 1.155 vs. 1.261 actual.

The replay shortfall was revealed in the lack of batting average. The Yankees replay batting average was .245 vs. .263 actual. And consequently, their slugging percentage was also lower.

Yankee replay at-bats were 3% higher than actual due to a greater number of extra inning games.

Yankee replay home runs were 7% less, doubles 9% less, and triples 28% less. This all factored into not reaching their 1961 win total of 109.

Game 1: Minnesota (Ramos) at New York (Ford)

Whitey Ford surrendered a home run to Twins clean up hitter Jim Lemon in the second inning. There was no further scoring until a leadoff home run by Yankee Hector Lopez to tie the game and force extra innings in the bottom of the ninth.

Lopez again led the charge in the 11th with a leadoff single and the Yanks went on to rally a run and an Opening Day home win, 2-1.

Game 37: Chicago (Wynn) at New York (Turley)

All Star White Sox shortstop Luis Aparicio was ejected in the 4th for disputing a called strike.

Yankee centerfielder Mickey Mantle gunned down White Sox Wes Covington at home in the 5th. During the next at-bat, Yankee leftfielder Yogi Berra mirrored the feat by throwing out White Sox Roy Sievers at the plate. Chicago's aggressive baserunning went unrewarded as the Yanks coasted to a 5-2 win.

Game 17: New York (Turley) at Minnesota (Ramos)

The Twins rallied for four runs in the bottom of the eighth inning to take a 6-4 lead. Yankee Yogi Berra, pinch-hitting for Hector Lopez, drilled a three-run home run in the ninth inning to garner the Yankee comeback win. Harmon Killebrew had a solo HR in the third, drew three walks and scored two runs.

Overall, the Yankees were productive at the plate, outscoring (+36%), outhitting (+22%) and out-homer (+62%) their opponents. The Yanks struck out 8% less and walked 8% less than their opponents. But their on/off streaky power didn't always translate to wins. The Pythagorean statistic calculated their replay winning percentage should have been .651, closer to their actual .673 win pct. based on the difference in runs scored versus their opponents throughout the season.

Game 52: Kansas City (Herbert) at New York (Coates)

Yankee starter Jim Coates hurled a no-hitter until two outs in the ninth. With A's Jim Stephens on base with a walk, catcher Jim Pignatano doubled him in to break the no-hitter and shutout, then Leo Posada singled Pignatano home. Yankee closer Luis Arroyo (A,X) retired the last batter to post the save.
